CONCLUSIONS: The LCROSS plume is not detectable from CCD47 due to poor image contrast from scattered light. DOC, GJON, and Agile images have dynamic ranges greater than 2 times the amount of scattered light in Cabeus Crater. Neither exposure times nor spatial resolution determine detectability. Scattered light is the dominant factor in plume detectability.

The 48th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference – 20 March 2017 – This work was supported by NASA's Lunar Data Analysis Program through grant number NNX15AP92G.